

In Loving Memory of Joshua Tylor Peregory

Joshua Tylor Peregory was born October 3, 1992 in Greenville South Carolina, to James W. and Tabitha G. Peregory. The first child of three Joshua was always full of energy running around everywhere he went, even when we told him to slowdown! As a young child Joshua always pushed the boundaries to see how far he could get. Joshua always wanted to explore everything himself to get a better understanding of how everything worked. For example, Joshua would get a new toy car and by the end of the night, Joshua would have it broken down trying to figure out how it was connected and how everything worked.

As he grew up nothing really changed he still had to explore everything for himself in order to understand it. Joshua was a military child so he grew a custom to traveling all over the world and learning how to make new friends wherever he went. Joshua always had the biggest smile on his face, even when he wasn't happy about the situation or he knew he was probably in trouble, he still smiled that beautiful bright smile! Joshua always made the best out of any situation, by holding on to the things and people he loved.

Once Joshua's brother was born Joshua now had a partner in crime. Instead of Joshua exploring everything by himself he now had Austin exploring with him, with Joshua always being the ringleader. We knew every time Joshua ran in asking for a band aid for his brother that it really meant load up we are going to the hospital to get Austin stitches because they had gotten into some type of mischief together.

By the time Joshua's sister Ti'era was born, Joshua turned into a protector. Joshua always made sure nothing or no one hurt her. Yes, they all three had their good and bad times but in the end they always stuck together like glue for each other just as siblings do.

Once Joshua reached teenage to adulthood years Joshua had a little more difficult time adjusting but he still managed to always keep that big smile across his face. Joshua was a true momma's boy! Joshua always referenced our love and bond to the type of bond and love Elvis Presley and his mother had. He would tell me every day, "Momma I love you, more then you could ever know" and I knew he meant it even when he was upset with me or me upset with him. Joshua always had to know exactly where I was and who I was with because he always wanted to be around to make sure I was ok!

As Joshua continued on his journey thru life, his brother Austin gave him the best gift of all his niece LillieAnne. Joshua loved LillieAnne just as if she was his because if you knew Joshua you know his dream was to find the love of his life and have children of his own. Joshua loved everyone never judging anyone because he knew how it felt to be judge. Joshua's journey lead him to the man he called his second dad, Paul A. Garcia. Paul and Joshua had a bond no one had ever seen. They loved each other unconditional just as if they were blood. In fact when people would see the two out together they always said they would have never even thought Joshua wasn't Paul's biological son. Paul was the only person that Joshua would really listen too and take advise from therefore, Paul always tried to lead Joshua down the right road. Thru Paul, Joshua met his other siblings per Joshua's own words. Mark Anthony, Paul Daniel, and Maggie Cassandra Garcia and nine more nieces and nephews. Alex, Peter, Gabby, Lily, Liam, Lea, Madison, Isiah and Cassen Garcia. Joshua would call them up anytime day or night and they would just listen to each other. Joshua always had a ear to listen and a heart of giving that is why everyone he came in contact with loved him in many different ways!

His heart of giving is what lead me to make the decision to donate Joshua's major organs, so Joshua can continue his journey of loving and giving and continue to bless everyone with his infectious smile, heart and other organs!

Joshua leaves behind his father James W. Peregory and sister Ti'era Peregory of Converse, Texas. His mother Tabitha Peregory and stepfather Paul A.Garcia of San Antonio, Texas.
