

On Friday, July 24th 2020 Deborah Diane White went to be with the Lord at the age of 64. Debbie was born May 7th 1956 in Germany to Edwin and Renate (Schmidt) Cochran.

Affectionately known as Debbie, she was a self-proclaimed "Military Brat" who spent her first years in Germany. She often shared fond memories of her childhood there. Her family moved to the United States when she was a young girl and San Antonio, Texas would be her home for the remainder of her life. Just a few years after graduating from MacArthur high school, Debbie met and married her first husband, Elmer Barney Gibson. They shared a 30-year marriage full of life's joys and trials until his death in August 2006. Even after his passing, Debbie continued to run their business, National Federation of Retired Persons, until her last days.

In 2007 Debbie married Robert Loren White. Together, they enjoyed a second youth attending countless music concerts, movies and activities. They had an unending energy for fun together. The two of them traveled to many places in the U.S. and Caribbean. They shared a particular passion for Key West, Florida where they vacationed multiple times. The two had plans to explore many other places together.

Although she never had any biological children, Debbie had two stepdaughters from her first marriage. She blessed the lives of three grandchildren and six great-grandchildren as well as two nieces and four nephews. Debbie often served as a mother figure for several of these children and she loved them all as if they were her own.

Debbie was a proud graduate of Trinity University. She had an immense love of books and at times talked of becoming a writer herself. She was endlessly giving and loving to kin and strangers alike. Christmastime was her absolute favorite time of year because she loved spreading joy to others. Debbie is survived by her husband, Robert White, her brothers Daniel and Dale Cochran, sister Margo and their families. Debbie is also survived by her three grandchildren, Misty Earl, Christopher Earl, Stephanie Lyons and their respective six children. Her loving nature will be greatly missed by all. Celebration of Life Service date is to be determined.
